- Window: Start, Taskbar - Size: 96 x 96 - Supported OS: Windows 7, Windows 8, Windows 8.1, Windows 10 - Language: English - Resume: YesThe NBA played a big role in Ferguson, Mo., protester Michael Brown's death last summer. Brown's mom alleges that the league was involved in covering up the shooting. It also produced an awkward moment between Knicks point guard Jose Calderon and Knicks owner James Dolan during the Knicks' preseason game on Friday against the Brooklyn Nets. You can read all about how Calderon's mother was angry about the way the Knicks handled her son's death in the Gothamist, but the main accusation was that the NBA allowed the grand jury to hide behind smoke and mirrors to decide the George Zimmermann was acting within his rights in shooting Brown. However, the NBA's statement said that it had no evidence or information to support such a claim. Instead, NBA Commissioner Adam Silver sent the following statement to the media: "The NBA is aware that an alleged representative of Michael Brown's family met with investigators from the Department of Justice's Civil Rights Division on July 28 in connection with the shooting of Michael Brown in Ferguson, Missouri. "It is of course a matter of grave concern and disappointment to the NBA that the family has chosen to allege that the shooting of Michael Brown was the result of a cover-up by the NBA. "We take the matter very seriously, and are committed to fully cooperating with the Department of Justice, which has agreed to assist local law enforcement in their investigation into the matter. “As an organization, we will not be distracted or diverted from the important work of delivering safe, thoughtful, and reasoned games, and ensuring the best possible experience for our players, our fans, our employees, and everyone in the wonderful cities and communities in which we compete.” The statement went on to say that they have no information to support the claim that the league handled the shooting any differently than every other time a law enforcement agency investigates a situation. The Knicks lost the game, 99-93, but whatever their fans are upset about, they didn’t affect any other part of the game.
