Here is some documentation for free on how to create a macro. NOTES: Macro features are available in Mac OS X version 10.5.8 or later. I'm sure this will get better as more people buy it. It was a pain to install though. When I downloaded it, it came as a.zip file and it was a.r file not a.exe file. So I had to find a way to open it with a notepad. I tried WinRAR and it doesn't work. I tried to open it in WinZip and it says it's a file with a corrupt extension. Then I tried WinSCP and I can't get it to open it. I tried to open it in notepad and it won't work. Then I tried to open it in paint, hoping it would make it into a.txt file but it says it's a picture and it can't be opened. So in the end I just copied it to my desktop and tried to run it from there and it works! I find it hard to believe that this was a problem for the developers. I want a.exe file with everything I need to work with. I have no idea if I'm missing something. I don't know if this is normal or not. I'm not seeing it mentioned on the site and if I can't get this work, then I guess I'll try another program to get it to work. I just want a.exe file that I can run and it will create the.txt files for me. I'm not sure why this was a problem. This is my last comment for now 77a5ca646e
