lung cancer (SCLC) is a radiosensitive tumour, with cures in about one-third of patients. Because of rapidly declining survival, we evaluated prognostic factors and 5-year survival after treatment of SCLC. Eighty-two patients (median age, 60 years; range, 37 to 80 years) with stage I and II SCLC were treated by two-dimensional conventional radiotherapy (median total dose, 60 Gy) with or without chemotherapy. Of 62 assessable patients, 10 (16%) achieved a complete response, 24 (39%) a partial response, and 28 (45%) stable disease. The 1- and 5-year survival rates were 50 and 21%, respectively. The 1-year survival rate was 80% in patients with operable disease (n = 38) and 21% in those with inoperable disease (n = 24) (P = 0.0006). The 5-year survival rate was 0% in patients with extensive disease, 36% in those with limited disease, and 25% in those with limited and extensive disease (P = 0.04). A multivariate analysis of patients with operable disease indicated a significant influence of age, Karnofsky performance score, and tumour-stage-related variables. Primary radiotherapy is effective in the treatment of SCLC. The survival rate is significantly influenced by clinical staging of the disease. A cure rate of 16% is reached only in patients with operable disease. Advances in the development of imaging agents for the evaluation of melanoma: Part I.

Melanoma is the most deadly form of skin cancer, with a 3-5% worldwide increase in incidence and metastasis to regional lymph nodes that make surgical and chemotherapeutic management of this cancer difficult. Although a variety of diagnostic modalities have been described, none has been proven to be the optimum. The present review will focus on the recent
